An Irish Pilot on board an Indiaman.

On the 5th of April, 1833, the Hon. Company's ship Dunira passed the well known rocks called the Bull, Cow and Calf, on her way to Bantry Bay, whither she had been ordered to repair on her return from the East. Now it happened that of the hundred and forty persons on board the ship not one had ever been in that bay before; and consequently as the weather was thick and windy, the Captain, as night drew on, became very anxious to secure the service of a pilot. However, several guns had been fired, the abutting cliff at the entrance, called the Sheep's Head, had been long passed, and the ship had advanced far into the bay, ere a small skiff was observed standing towards her. In a few minutes after, the Indiaman was hove to, the skiff alongside, and our hero on board. His manners showed that he had been to sea, for he touched his cap reverently on reaching the quarter deck, and then with huge strides, that seemed like a march galvanised, walked aft, where the Captain stood to receive him.

It was a group for a painter. About the middle of the quarter deck stood a little, acute, aristocratic looking gentleman, dressed in gold banded cap, and the company's uniform—he is the captain.—Before him was a strange ungainly looking being, about six feet high, uncouthly dressed, and as remarkable in feature and form of limb, as in the fashion of his apparel—he was the pilot. Several officers surrounded by Midshipmen, and here and there a Quartermaster, whose lantern threw a light on the centre figures, and also enabled the spectator to discover some rough looking personages peering from a distance through the darkness, and endeavoring to gain a glimpse of the proceedings, complete the group.

"My Lord, your Royal Highness," Admiral, Sir, said the Irishman, making a grotesque inclination of his body, "I was the pilot that piloted the last Admiral into the harbour, and I hope your honor will let me pilot you up."

"Are you well acquainted with the bay?" said the Captain, eyeing him with intense curiosity.

"Truth, your honor, does a man know his own breeches best? Isn't it I that's been cruising up and down here these seventeen years; and who ought to know it better than I do, your honor? Sure, I know it as well, every bit of it, Admiral dear, as I know the deck of my own little craft there, long life to her!"

A few more words passed, and as the Captain was anxious to secure his services, Pat proceeded to the poop, intrusted with all the power of a pilot. The ship at the same time was making about eight knots, and standing right up the bay with a fair wind. He continued walking up and down by the break of the poop for some minutes, giving occasional directions to the helmsman in a very seaman-like manner. At length he turned to the Captain.

"We must go about, Admiral."

"Go about! Why!"

"We shall be ashore in ten minutes, else."

The Captain looked surprised; but it is always very dangerous to question the wisdom of a pilot, and especially so in a ship worth nearly half a million sterling; so the Captain demurred an instant, and complied. In one minute the ship resounded with the shrieks and shouts of Pipes and his myrmidons; the officers flew to their stations, the men to theirs.

"Raise tacks and sheets—helm's a-lee—mainsail haul!" and the huge after yards, that but a moment before appeared as immovable as the fixed mast itself, swung round with the lightness of a wand in a dancer's hand. "Steadily with the boom, there! Let go and haul!"

The fore yards were brought steadily round, and braced sharp up, the ship regathered her way, and was soon rapidly crossing the bay. But no sooner did she near the opposite side, than, to the astonishment of all on board but one, the evolution was repeated; and this occurred several times. The night was dark and cold; and to the crew, who had just returned from India, it appeared especially so. The rain fell copiously; it was a cold and cutting rain, and the drops that struck the skin tingled like shots. The wind was sharp and boisterous. The men sheltered themselves, as well as they could, behind the windward bulwarks: the Mids on the poop were glad to make a similar use of the hencoops. The Captain and Chief Officer applied themselves assiduously to the night-glass, endeavoring to catch the features of either shore as they neared them alternately. At times they conversed eagerly together; then they called to the pilot, or descended to the cabin to examine their charts.

"All right, all right, Admiral; you'll see, we shall be there presently, may be," was his constant reply.

But the Captain neither appeared to think it "all right," nor to be convinced of the truth of the pilot's predictions. "I can't imagine," said he, "what he's about—I don't understand it at all. I have great mind to take the ship out of his hands. I wish the night would clear up a little. He's actually beating us out of the bay: Jove! isn't that the Sheep's Head?"

"It looks like it, certainly," said the officer.

"And what would your honor have it look like, said Pat, who overheard them.

"What are you about? Are you drunk, Sir," said the Captain. "You're beating us out of the bay."

"Oh! bating ye out of the bay is it, Admiral dear! Wait a minit, and ye'll soon see where I'm bating ye to."

"Take the fellow below," said the little Captain, getting into a passion, 'let me see no more of him till I send for him. Confound him; he has delayed us an hour. I can't conceive this fool's motive.' That the Captain learned afterwards.

In a few minutes the ship was again before the wind, and standing up the bay, and in due time the pilot, having been sent for, reappeared upon deck.

"Where are we now?" said the Captain to him, as soon as he reached the poop.

"Where are we?" replied Pat, looking around him, 'why this is Beer Island—what should it be?' Didn't I say we should be here presently, now, Admiral dear?"

"What depth of water is there?"

"About forty-five fathoms, surely."

The leadline had already been passed, and in a few minutes the Quarter-master corroborated the statement.

"I see," said the Captain, 'you erred wilfully.—Why did you not bring us here at once? eh, Sir."

"Bring ye here at once!" said Pat, doubtfully.

"Yes, Sir, at once, you scoundrel! What do you mean by it? to keep a whole ship's company exposed in a night like this, when we might have been here in a half an hour from the time you boarded us. What was your motive, sirrah? You ought to be cobbed."

"To bring ye here at once! Was that what ye wanted, Captain?"

"Certainly," said the Captain, 'what else did I hire you for?"

"And two pounds for the like o' that, and a fair wind, too! Admiral dear. Wouldn't your honour a thought I'd been cheating ye! There'd a been no conscience in it at all," said Pat, scratching his head.

And thus, for conscience sake, had this Irishman been keeping a whole crew hard at work, and exposed to severe weather, for nearly an hour.—Let the pious exceed that if they can.

In a few minutes the anchor was dropped, the chain veered to ninety-six fathoms, the sails furled, the boatswain had piped 'Grog, O,' and the wet and weary crew were fast forgetting the vexations they had endured from the Irish pilot.

I shall now give a minute description of our hero; and the reader must imagine a day to pass in the interim. As I have said, his height was about six feet, his limbs were long and large, but so ill-fitting that he looked like a man made by subscription; that is, as if a dozen large men had contributed each a limb, or some other portion, and he had been made up of the aggregate; or, to adopt a more possible fancy, he seemed as if his limbs had been broken on the wheel, and badly set again. His dress consisted of a ragged tarpaulin souwester, an old brown Flushing coat, which descended almost to his knees, and thirdly, what appeared at first sight to be a pair of piebald trousers, but which a close inspection showed to consist of two pairs, a pair of white over a pair of blue, which, as the holes did not fall in the same places in both, were together as good as a whole one. The end of a blue worsted comforter, which peeped out at the throat of his tightly-buttoned coat, and a pair of Wellington boots, on anew and improved principle, having holes in the toes, as their owner said, to let and the water, completed the worthy's attire. His face was tan, but red and weather-beaten; his eye quick and restless; his hands immensely large and red. And now for his second adventure.

As our hero himself might have said, it was a dark windy night, about four o'clock in the morning. The second Mate, a Midshipman, and a Quarter-master, were the only individuals on the deck of the Hon. Company's ship Dunira, and probably the only one awake on board. The two former were pacing the quarter-deck; the latter, with his lantern beside him, stood motionless be-

"How's the wind?" said the first of these.

"Dead south-west," replied the mate of the watch.

"Right in our teeth; but turn the hands up."

In a few minutes the silence of the ship was broken by the Boatswain and his mates, with their pipes shrieking in chords until the decks rang again. "Up all hammocks" resounded their melodious voices, and in an instant they darted below.

"Show a leg and save clew," said the Master-at-Arms, as he hurried forward on the gun-deck, grasping his way among the hammocks with one hand, as he buttoned his trousers with the other.

Lights were soon distributed through the decks, and the half-sulky and sleepy sailors began to roll out of their hammocks, which were soon lashed and carried on deck.

"All hands up anchor," was the next cry with which the decks reverberated.

"Bring-to below, there," said the first mate, speaking down the main hatchway. "Bear a hand, and swift your capstain bars here! All ready at the after hatchway?"

"All ready, Sir," was the reply.

"All ready forward?"

"All ready, Sir."

"Strike up, fifer! Huzza for Blackwall!"

The fifer fifed merrily, round went the men with the capstain bars, keeping time with their feet to his music, and shouting at intervals in chorus to rally themselves at their labor; and in a short time the ninty-six fathoms of chain were rounded in, the sails loosed, and the old ship once more beating out of the bay. But the wind was strong, obstinate, and opposed; ere noon it increased to almost a gale, and it was not until after eleven hours' labor that the crew found themselves again abreast the Sheep's Head, where the pilot had brought them so much against their own will a short time before. That worthy was still on board, for the Captain foreseeing the work to be gone through, and wishing to avail himself of his local knowledge, had engaged him to keep a look-out on the Dreanstle; and, as it did not seem likely that he would be able to get rid of him immediately after leaving the bay, had promised to take him to London, whither he was very anxious to go.

"One more tack," said the Captain, "and we shall do. Is the pilot forward,"

"Yes, Sir; and he kept a smart look out all thro'; he knows the bay well, and is no fool of a sailor, notwithstanding the trick he served us."

As this passed our hero made his appearance, and surmounting the poop ladder with three awkward strides, he made his way to the Captain.

"All right now, Admiral."

"Yes; but why do you come aft?"

"There's no doubt I must go to London, now, Admiral, for my own little craft couldn't live in the likes of this, at all, at all."

"Yes; so I promised you. But go instantly forward again. I ordered you to keep a look-out there."

"But it's all right now, Captain. All right now. We shall be clear away in half an hour."

"Go forward again, Sir; and don't leave the forecastle without permission. It blows fresher and fresher; I think the fog is clearing a little."

The Captain looked, and through the dense fog he could distinctly perceive foaming and boiling breakers, as the sailor had reported, close on the lee-bow."

"What is that?" he earnestly enquired of the pilot.

"Sunken rocks, Admiral. All right, your honor! I know 'em, as indeed it's reason I should, seeing by own brother, Tim, God rest his soul! was lost on them not a year ago."

"What water is there close to them?"

"Forty fathoms."

The Captain drew a peep breathe. The ship was going at the rate of ten or twelve knots an hour. Whilst the above conversation passed, they were almost within the breakers; it was too late to attempt to go about. With the judgement and quick determination that marks a true sailor, the Captain instantly comprehended the extent of danger and the only chance of escape. By standing right on, if wind, ship, and cordage hold them, they might weather the danger. On they went, every instant the breakers grew more distinct and louder; the ship drew nearer and nearer, the gale seemed to increase, the muzzles of her quarter deck guns were ploughing the water, the spray of the broken waves dashed half up the foresail, and they seemed determined to arrest her course, as rank after rank, they broke against her bow; and yon might imagine her roaring in angry determination, as she rushed through them, and threw them indignantly aside;—on she went, as if madly rushing to destruction, the winds howling in her rigging, like a legion of fiends, enraged that their prize notwithstanding, passed into the [illegible] breakers, not a word was spoken—the eyes of the whole crew were intently fixed on one object; let a tack, or a sheet, start now, and there is their grave before them—they may perish within a few hours' sail of their homes, and no man be able to give an account of their fate. The Captain stood by the mizen-mast, holding by a belaying-pin, his eyes travelling slowly over the rigging with the warmest anxiety; every cord and canvass was strained to its full bearing, but none gave way.—The Pilot's countenance, as he stared open-mouthed at the danger, was one of mingled fear and astonishment. The ship was almost within the breakers, as she swept by them—a moment more, and they were passed. The effect on all on board was as if there had been but one valve to all their bosoms, and that had been suddenly opened. The officers met and smiled, as they turned to look at their late threatening enemy; the men gathered in groups to jest and descant upon it; the Pilot, with a very doubtful expression of countenance, sidled up to the Captain, who stood where he had been in the moment of danger, and was now silently observing the conduct of the crew.

"All right, ye'll trust me agin when I say its all right, Admiral. I knew where they were."

"Your carelessness nearly lost the ship, sir."

"Ah! but didn't I know the old craft—didn't I know what she'd go through, honey?"

"Hold your tongue, sir. You never sailed in her before; what could you know about her?"

"Troth! but didn't I know what the Admiral was that had command iv'er?"

"Go forward, sir; let me have no more of you."

The Irishman slunk forward, no less abashed by the Captain's repudiation of his blarney, than by the consciousness of his own remissness; but we have not done with him yet.

On the day following that one which the last adventure occurred, the ship was in the channel, and received on board the Isle of Wight pilot, a very respectable, quiet, decent kind of a man, named Love—Cupid in flushings, and no mistake.

Our Irishman had now become a great favourite with the crew. We like those who can sympathise even with our feelings, and as the men had discovered that he shared with them in an unfortunate relish for strong liquors, they were not long in forgiving his trespasses as fully as the most Christian spirit could have desired. Another great source of his popularity was a power he possessed of exciting laughter. There are two ways of making people laugh—wit and folly; by the first we find subjects for their mirth; by the second we ourselves become the subject of laughter. In the first case we are laughed with; in the second we are laughed at—the first is the wit, the second the fool.—Now, our Irishman had little wit, but his folly was so humorous that but few would have wished him to have exchanged it for wit. To look at him, and try to imagine him either saying a grave thing or doing a wise one, was like playing a little farce to oneself, the thing seemed so impossible. If he stumbled into trouble, he soon managed to blunder out again; and the mode of escape was generally as ludicrous as the accident.

A hammock had been given him, but as he preferred a roomy berth, a luxury by which the spacious accomodations of his own hooker, had probably rendered necessary, and he had hitherto slept in the sail room or on the deck, as suited his pleasure, about nine o'clock, having cajoled the Midshipmen out of two glasses of grog, the Boatswain out of another, and the Captain's steward of a fourth, he betook himself to the deck; and although it was raining very fast, he laid his head on a coil of ropes, and slept for some time. At length he awoke, and finding his position rather uncomfortable, removed to beneath the poop awning, and there he stood in his wet flushing, looking about as desirable a bed fellow as a well soaked bear. The awning cabin being near which he stood, had been appropriated to the use of the Isle of Wight pilot; who having about an hour before slung his cot, made his bed, and disposed everything to his own satisfaction, returned to his duty on deck, and about 11 o'clock, as if to add a crown of reward to his industry and forethought that had made such comfortable arrangements, a cuddly servant en'e ed, and placed a bumper of grog on the locker, to await Mr. Love's return. It was done in an instant; but Pat had observed the proceeding, as also the interior of the cabin. The sheets of the cot looked white and inviting—the grog was a very bait for him.

neath the pood-awning, apparently listening to the wind, and watching the clouds, as they hurried past. The tread of the two officers, and the occasional splash of the waves, we're the only sounds to be heard. The moon was seen indistinctly through the clouds, giving such an idea of her full splendour as the remains of many a baronial castle afford of their appearance in the hour of their completeness and grandeur. Distance and time are alike in this. We never have a perfect view of the former; neither have we of the past or future; but our deficiencies in actual knowledge are more than supplied by fancy. So much for sentiment! S fors see so much that is grand, beautiful, awful, and varied, that if they have a chord of poetry in them, it must be struck into utterance.

"Is it eight bells!" said the officer.

"Wants two minutes, Sir," was the Quartermaster's reply.

"Light another lantern, bring it on deck, and then strike the bell."

The Quartermaster did as he was ordered.

"Call the Boatswain. Mr. S——, tell the chief mate that it is eight bells."

The Midshipman and Quartermaster each disappeared, and in a few minutes returned; the Boatswain and chief officer soon appeared on deck.

"Who is that for?" said he to the servant.

"For the pilot."

"And may be he'll enjoy it."

The servant went below, and in a few minutes afterwards the Irishman was reposing in supreme comfort, Mr. Love's grog being we can't say precisely where.

The night continued squally, and it was nearly six o'clock in the morning before the proprietor of the cabin could quit his duty for the purpose of indulging himself in the luxury of repose.

"What a blessing to have one's cabin to oneself," said he as he closed the door. "Now for a glorious snooze." He placed his lantern on the locker. It burned dimly, for the flame was already half hidden in the socket. He tried to snuff it with his fingers and out it went.

"I wonder where they have put my grog?" His heart exulted as he felt the glass, but sunk as he lifted it to his lips. "Gone again," he exclaimed: always so. Hang these crews of Indiamen—sweepings of London." After a few imprecations, he proceeded to undress—an operation at which sailors are usually expeditious.

"How this deck looks," he observed, laying his hand on the bed clothes for the first time. "There's a wet swab in bed! Why it's full of wet swabs! I'll complain to the Captain! Wet, all over, as seaweed in the gulf! There's a man in the cot! Turn out! Who are you? I'll break every bone in your body!"

A storm of blows on the top of the cot, and kicks at the bottom, disturbed its inmate. "What's the matter?" said he, slowly rising himself on his elbow.

"Matter! You're in my cot."

"Eugh!" replied Paddy, lying complacently down again, "that all! Be aisy, man, can't ye; there's room for two!"

CERTIFICATE—We have examined Doctor Thompson's Uteri Abdominal Supporter, and believe it from its shape to be well adapted to the relief of Prolapsis Uteri. We moreover state that we consider it a cheap article, and therefore feel no hesitation in recommending it to those who may require the use of such and similar articles.

Daily Commercial Journal.

ROBERT M. RIDDLE, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

MONDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 22, 1845.

TERMS:

DAILY PAPER.—Five Dollars per annum, to present subscribers. ☞ On the first of January, our terms for the Daily paper will be slightly altered.
TRI-WEEKLY.—Three Dollars per annum.
WEEKLY.—Two Dollars per annum, in advance.

Provision for Christmas.

Beale has just received a large supply of Shell Oysters, to which we were introduced on Saturday night, with all the freedom of printer's license.

Candor compels us to confess that we have made no new acquaintance lately that has afforded us equal pleasure. These oysters are fresh, fat and finely flavored, and altogether worthy the attention of lovers of good things.

Allegheny Book Store.

Messrs. McDowell & Co., have opened a bookstore on Federal street, Allegheny. We have spent an hour looking over their stock of books, and found it to contain an unusual share of rare and valuable works some that are not to be met with in our own stores, and all remarkably cheap. They have also a handsome assortment of ornamental and illustrated books, suited to this season of present making.

Such an establishment has been a desideratum in Allegheny, and we cannot doubt, will be liberally sustained by the people of that city.

Our Voice is for War.

The vote on Mr. Cass' war resolutions having passed over, the war fever, we are fearful is subsiding.—This is to be deplored. Mr. Cass made a glorious onset, warlike in every thing, even to his allusions to the British newspaper press. The fact is, that the General has a constant eye to Buncombe. Ever since he gave to the world his Texas letter basing his adhesion to annexation, upon the language of a British periodical, we have been inclined to that belief. He was Minister to the Court of St. Cloud, and found it necessary to denounce the memorable treaty of the Three Powers, because of the comments of the British newspapers, and now he is raving with the same madness. We should be the last, heaven knows, to depreciate the character and dignity of the newspaper press, yet we should think the official declarations and manifestos of Governments and their Ministers were the only authorities that our Government and National Legislature should recognize, while discussing the temper and condition of our Foreign Relations. Not so with the great luminary Gen. Cass, and the lesser light Mr. Sevier. Newspaper paragraphs suffice with them for official declarations upon such ground, these Senators take their seats, and the one, desiring to make a proper impression upon the country, the other upon Arkansas, war is declared, almost.

But having delivered themselves to Buncombe, the war fever has abated. We lament to perceive that no step is taken beyond Mr. Cass' inquiry toward preparation for War. No appropriation of ten millions to the Army, and twenty millions to the Navy is talked of! War then, we begin to apprehend, is not so near as the Democracy would have us believe it. We repeat this is to be deplored. Mr. Mangum knew what he was about, when he said in the Senate that when "War should come, there would not be found an anti war man in the community." He is right.

We are all for War, Democrats and Whigs, but especially the Whigs. We are for War; right or wrong, we are for War, and we believe, we speak the sentiments of every Whig, when we say they are for War, on the same terms. They would prefer, of course, that we permit England to keep so much of Oregon as previous Democratic administrations, and Mr. Polk's also, agreed to surrender to John Bull: that is, all north of the 49th parallel of North Latitude, and refusing to them the navigation of Columbia river. Such a moderate proposition on our part, would have an honest look, and we could face the world without blushing, while we were fighting about Oregon.—Should Britain happen to accept such a compromise, we would be for declaring War on the very next honest pretext we could seize. The cause must be some defensible one, but War we must have. We care nothing for the blood and Treasure, it will cost the Nation to prosecute a War; we care nothing for the making of thousands and hundreds of thousands of widows and orphans, that will follow the declaration of War; we shall not stop to estimate the damage to the morals of the people, that follows, as the shadow of War; not what are these to the high and noble interests of party. The Democracy perceive the difference, from James K. Polk, down to the brownest and smallest democratic newspaper. And shall we Whigs be all cheated, and cut acted? Shall we be less than equally frantic with patriotism, and content with shouting for War, War with Great Britain!—No, No! We are, we declare again, we are for War. We would rather have right on our side, for the sake of the memory of our ancestors, who were honest people, but right or wrong, we are for War.

Native Creed---A Word in Season.

It was announced authoritatively by the American Aagle, the Native organ in this city, that the "Natives opposed the Whigs." This is true, but is not often avowed so honestly, and we give the editor of the American Eagle due credit for his candor.

The avowal is one of great interest and of some value at this moment. We are about entering upon the annual struggle for the election of City Officers, and the Natives will have their candidate, taken from the Whig ranks and with trifling exceptions the votes which are reckoned upon for him are Whig votes.—The Whigs and Antimasons will have their candidate in the field, and if doubt or danger menaces his success, it is from the defection of Whigs to the Native banner. At the last election, very many Whigs voted the Native ticket, believing that by doing so they were not harming their own party, and not giving aid or the chance of success to the Democrats, their natural enemies. There was in that contest, no avowal that Nativism was hostility to Whigism. We now have it boldly proclaimed, and we may assure ourselves, we suppose that no man who has a particle of attachment to Whig principles, or a pulsation of affection for the Whig party, will be found in sympathy or political fellowship with the Natives. They declare war against the Whigs, and the Whigs must keep faith with themselves, and respond in fitting terms at the ballot box.

☞ The editor of the American appears to marvel that we permit "two days" to pass without a reply to him, he should not be surprised at that. We can not afford, if we had inclination, to bestow so much time and attention upon him as he devotes to us.—We let him "whack away" for a week, for it is always easy to settle his week's work in a paragraph or two, and we like to "lump it" with Snarley, but if he is a little "mangy," he should endeavor to seem "not itchy," as though we had'nt put salt under his hide.

But about "Autumn." If the editor will declare unequivocally and candidly, that he does believe Autumn to be "a gem of beauty," really a production of great merit, we will tell him exactly how much Mr. McDonald had to do with "making," "suggesting" or "writing" that fragment, and how much we had to do with it. But we shall expect the American to publish our reply to his question as to Mr. McDonald's agency in the authorship. He must pledge himself. It is a bargain!

☞ Those persons who have been in the habit of getting our daily paper at ten cents per week, can no longer be supplied at the price. By paying to the carriers thirteen cents per week, they may still obtain the enlarged sheet until a further announcement is made. The price of the single sheet remains at TWO CENTS, at which copies may be had at the office.

☞ It is due to Mr. Henderson to state that he did not request the publication we made on Thursday, so that he is not chargeable with seeking this controversy. We gave the information derived from him as a proper comment on the failures of the Eastern mails.

For the Commercial Journal.

MR. RIDDLE—Dear Sir: I have observed a communication in the Post of this morning, signed Fair Play, which is any thing but what it purports to be. If the writer of the same, had a name, which he was not ashamed of before the public, he should have signed it; but in reply to the queries made, the passengers of the Good Intent Passenger Line, (not Mail,) were not brought to Chambersburg by the Magnetic Telegraph, but by a mode of conveyance, which the Good Intent Mail Line does not possess, East of said place, namely Horses, Coaches and Sleighs.

A. HENDERSON.

B. If the writer of Fair Play, would call on Mr. Robertson, of Market street, he can obtain the necessary information.

Liberty Party's Nomination.

The Liberty men on Saturday night nominated Dr. Joseph P. Gazzam, as their candidate for Mayor.—That party is wonderfully hopeful. They are regularly whipped every year, and yet here they come again with new candidates all the same as though they had some expectation of electing.

Holiday Presents.

We have arranged under this head the advertisements of articles offered as suitable for Christmas and New Year's gifts. Those of our advertising friends who have such articles for sale, would do well to announce them in this way.

Mexican Minister.

The New York Courier and Enquirer of Wednesday says—We have learned from a reliable source the particulars of the appointment of Mr. SLIDELL, of Louisiana, as United States Minister to Mexico. It seems that Mr. PARROTT, whose brother is already a Consul at Mazatlan, a Mexican port, was sent to the city of Mexico to sound the Government; and he ascertained the fact that they were ready to negotiate and willing to settle all the difficulties with the United States for money. He returned to New Orleans the last of October, and went immediately to Washington.

Mr. SLIDELL, learning the result of Mr. Parrott's mission, made application for the appointment, which he obtained. The basis of the negotiation, we understand, is the Rio Grande for the boundary, from the mouth to the source, and thence a line North to our boundary; and the sum required, as a consideration, is $15,000,000, towards which the amount due by Mexico to American claimants will be taken in part payment.

According to the annexed paragraph from the New York News, an administration journal, Mr. Slidell has authority for a far more extended boundary line than that alluded to above.

CALIFORNIA.—It seems to be understood that Mr. Slidell, our new Minister to Mexico, is fully authorized to arrange our boundary with that Republic upon the most liberal footing. His powers in this respect are believed to be so extensive that under them he may negotiate a transfer to the United States of the right of Mexico to Upper California.

This could probably be effected by making our line follow the course of the Rio Grande del Norte from the Gulf of Mexico until it reaches the thirty-second degree of north latitude, and then run westward on that parallel to the Pacific ocean.—Of course such a result will not be brought about without a handsome compensation to Mexico for her relinquishment of territory. Our claim against her for indemnification to our citizens is now very large, and no way is so likely as this to secure its full and immediate satisfaction. Indeed, so far as the consideration which we may give her is balanced by this account, it may be said to amount to nothing; for, if we give Mexico the fullest credit for good will in the premises, her distracted and impoverished condition warrants but a slight hope that she will very speedily pay us in money.

Mount Lebanon.

THE AMERICAN MISSION BROKEN UP.—The appointment, by the Sublime Porte, of a Commissioner called Chekeeb Effendi, for the pacification of Mount Lebanon, where a bloody civil war had been raging between the Druses and Maronites, was mentioned some time since. By a letter from Syria, of October 10th, in the New York Observer, it appears that the new functionary has entered upon his duties with a strong hand. The Missionaries of the American Board of Missions, who had taken up their permanent residence in Abeik, have also obeyed a summons to do the same. Their schools are disbanded, and most of their goods have been left. The tenth day found them all in Beirout, where their schools are still open to their operations, untouched by these changes.

THE NEW YORK MONEY MARKET.—The Express of Wednesday evening says:—"The demand for money is not met by the banks with so much readiness as was shown a short time ago. The caution on the part of the banks is caused by the preparation to meet the payment of the State loan, due on the 1st of January. The amount is $2,300,000, of which $1,000,000 is on hand. Of this debt, fully one quarter appears, not be re-invested in this country. Be this as it may, the loss of it cannot have any material effect on the money market, which is fully suplied for all the business of the city."

☞ It is with the deepest regret, says the Courier, that we learn the death of Mrs. Maria Brooks, the author of "Zophiel." She died on the 11th of November last, at Matanzas, in the island of Cuba, from the debility consequent on a fit of sickness. Mrs. Brooks was, at the time of her decease, about fifty years old. She was born at Medford, Mass. and for a considerable period resided in Boston. About fifteen years ago she visited France and England, and while there formed many friendships with distinguished persons in both countries, among others with Lafayette, Wordsworth, and Southy. Of late years she has resided principally in Matanzas.

☞ The Pennsylvanian, says the Boston Journal, a strong democratic paper, published at Philadelphia, advocates the appointment of Cap. McKeever to the command of the Philadelphia Navy Yard, on the ground that he is a good democrat! This is a specimen of political profligacy which we were not quite prepared to expect.—It would appear from the Report of the Secretary of the Navy, that Captain Rosseau was appointed to the Brazillian squadron, because, among other reasons, he was born beyond the Alleghanies!—If sectional and political qualifications are to be regarded by the Department as the criterion of merit, the sooner the people know it, the better.

A CONSIDERATE CUSTOM.—A correspondent of the Boston Atlas, writing from Harlem, in Holland, gives this curious bit of information:—Returning through the town, my guide pointed out small framed boards, hanging by the side of several doors, upon which were displayed oval pieces of lace work, placed over pink paper, to show their fineness; and which, I naturally supposed, indicated the residence of lace-makers, but was mistaken. According to his account, when Harlem surrendered to the Spaniards, after a long siege, one of the articles of capitulation was, that in every house in which there was, or was like to be, a young infant, should not be entered by the soldiery; and, as a token, the centre of an infant's cap was to be hung at the door. This symbol of multiplication is displayed a fortnight in advance, and remains as long after the birth—a knot of ribbon being added, in such a manner as to indicate the sex of the child; and during this time, by law, drums cannot be beat before the house, the furniture is exempt from legal execution, and the father is not liable to perform military or jury duty.

STRNGE AFFAIR.—A friend tells us the following singular story, says the New York Tribune:—Several years ago one Richard French, of Philadelphia, who was supposed to be in moderate circumstances, became endorser for some six or seven hundred dollars for the man who employed him as clerk. His employer failed, and French was compelled to pay the amount for which he was bound. This reduced him, as he pretended, to poverty, and his friends were appealed to for aid in his behalf. The Lehigh Company took him into its employ for a time as a clerk, paying him moderate wages and furnishing him with a house rent free. Two friends paid him each twenty-five cents per week, and the overseers of the poor allowed him fifty cents more to defray the expenses of himself and wife. A little more than a year ago he came to this city to collect a small debt, and during his stay was charitably entertained by the friend who tells us the story. He professed to be very low spirited, and used to mourn pitifully over the unfortunate circumstances which had reduced him, as he pretended to poverty. A short time since, he died, when it appeared that he was worth upwards of $30,000, and had pretended to be poor in order to gratify a miserly disposition.—A strange affair, truly.

Case of Judge Garland.

No little excitement, says the Baltimore American, and grief have been occasioned in New Orleans at the developments in the case of Judge RICE GARLAND, of the Supreme Court of Louisiana. It appears that a preliminary examination was had on the 10th instant before Judges Maurian and Collins, as to the nature of the reports affecting the character of Judge Garland. From the testimony given by John Kilty Smith, Esq., money broker, and John McDonough, Esq. it was shown that Judge G. had extracted by a chemical process the writing (except the signature) of a complimentary note addressed to him by Mr. McDonough, and had substituted the words of a promissory note for $6125, and that he obtained the money therefor from Mr. Smith. A day or two afterwards Mr. Smith exhibited the note to Mr. McD. who declared he had no such bill out, and advised Mr. S. to try and get his money again.

On the same afternoon Mr. Garland presented himself at Mr. McD.'s residence, pale, haggard, and evincing all the emotions of despair, and adjured him to save his, his wife's, his children's honor. To all Mr. McD. said to Judge Garland, the latter only replied "Save me, save me! my wife, my children!" Mr. McD. was moved by this distressing scene, particularly as he firmly believed, if he had remained obdurate, Mr. Garland would never have recrossed the river alive. McD. went the next day and took up the note—Mr. Garland having brought Mr. Smith $3,000 and odd of the money—giving another for $2,300 and odd, the balance, and destroyed it before the latter's face. He (Mr. McD.) then took it to Mr. Garland's, and destroyed it before the latter's face.

On the 11th Judge Garland attempted to drown himself in the river, but was prevented by persons near hand.

John B. Gough.

The National Police Gazette has a very hard story against Mr. Gough, whom the editor claims to have found in the house in that city whence he was taken after having been some days missing.—The substance of the statement is this: Gough was drunk when found in the house in Walker street—which is said to be one of ill-fame: he then made no pretence of having been induced to drink soda, drugged, &c., but begged the gentleman who went there to find him not to expose him. The editor says that Gough was the companion of a harlot night and day throughout his stay there, and once left the house, went to his hotel, procured a change of linen, and came back to his filthy and drunken debauch. The editor intimates that this was not Gough's first visit to the den in which he was found. This is a black statement, and we trust Mr. Gough can and will refute it.

Quaint Idea of Pleasures in Heaven.

Jeremy Taylor, speaking of the widow of a blacksmith who was constantly laboring to procure the necessaries of life, thus beautifully but quaintly portrays her character:

"Thus she lived, poor, patient and resigned.—Her heart was a passion-flower, bearing within it the crown of thorns and the cross of Christ. Her ideas of Heaven were few and simple. She rejected the doctrine that it was the place of constant activity, and not of repose, and believed, that when she at length reached it, she should work no more, but sit always in a clean white apron, and sing psalms."

Produce from a Single Acre.

Henry Colman, in his account of the market gardens about London, gives the following as the amount actually produced in one year from a single acre by a market gardener, the success being mainly attributed to trenching, heavy manuring and rotation, besides the usual course of good cultivation: Radishes, £10; Cauliflower, 60; Cabbages, 30; Celery—1st crop, 50; do., 2d crop, 40; Endive, 30. Total, £220—$1,110.

Death of a very Old Lady.

Died, at the residence of her son, T. H. Ward, of Richmond, Ky., Mrs. ——— Ward, in the hundred and eleventh year of her age. Mrs. Ward witnessed many of the exciting scenes of the Revolution, and has for many years drawn a pension as the widow of a Revolutionary soldier.

Death of Dr. Radcliffe.

The great Dr. Radcliffe, of London, had a great objection to paying his bills. A pavior, after long and fruitless attempts to get his accounts settled, caught the Doctor just getting out his carriage at his own door, and demanded the liquidation of his debt. "Why you rascal," said the Doctor, "do you pretend to be paid for such a piece of work? Why you have spoiled my pavement and then covered it over with earth to hide your bad work." "Doctor," said the pavior, "mine is not the only bad work that the earth hides." "You dog you," said Radcliffe, "are you a wit? You must be poor—come in, and you shall be paid."

Affairs in Hayti.

We learn, says the New York Herald, from Capt. Mann, of the St. Marks, from Miragoane, Hayti, that when he left, twenty-one days since, the Haytians and Dominicans were both assembling all the forces they could, preparatory to a final struggle for the supremacy, and a battle was daily expected to take place.

Cost of a President's Message.

The Messsage of President Polk, says the Lancaster Sentinel, has probably been read by three millions of people in the United States by this time. As this operation requires about two hours to each individual, it has consumed of their time six millions of hours, two hundred and fifty thousand days, or about seven hundred years. Allowing ten hours to a day it took six hundred thousand days to read it, which at a dollar a day, would amount to the pretty little sum of six hundred thousand dollars. Add to this the expense for setting it up in the different papers in the Union, the paper on which it is printed and the cost of transportation, we shall probably have a grand total of about one million of dollars as the price of a President's message.

Genius.

We clip the following from the Boston Journal:—"Some one observed to Henry, Prince of Prussia, that it was rare to find genius, wit, memory and judgment united in the same person. 'Surely, there is nothing astonishing in this,' replied the Prince; genius takes his daring flight towards Heaven—he is the eagle; wit moves along by fits and starts—he is the grasshopper; memory marches backward—he is the tortoise. How absurd to expect all these animals to move in unison!"

Tirrell, the Murderer.

The New Orleans Picayune of the 9th inst., says:—"This man, accused of one of the foulest crimes, has since his arrival in this city maintained the most gloomy silence, scarcely answering the officers who have occasion to address him, and passing the whole of the day in a lethargic state. There is so little doubt, from his conduct since his arrest, that he will snatch the very first opportunity to commit suicide, that the officers are continually compelled to watch him, or to put him under such restraint that it would be impossible for him to destroy himself."

THE GALE AT BOSTON.—The Boston Journal of Tuesday last says:—"We had a furious gale from the North last night. The wind blew in fitful and fearful gusts, and its howlings frequently reminded us of the poor fellows on our coast, drenched in salt water, worn out with the labors of a long passage, and perhaps short of provisions and clothing. Such a welcome as old Boreas gave them last night to Massachusetts Bay, although a strong one, was not a very warm one, or of a character altogether acceptable to their feelings.

We are informed by Col. Hatch, that the gale at New Bedford, last evening, was very severe. An unfinished wooden building, belonging to Benjamin Rodman, Esq., which he was about erecting for an ice house of the largest class, was blown down during the gale."

☞ It is said that William Smith will decline the office of Governor of Virginia. It is not every one that will refuse such an office.

The new French Minister of War.

The Paris correspondent of the Courrier des Etats Unis, speaks of this gentleman in the following terms:—"The elevation of M. de St. You to the Ministry, has taken the public by surprise.—The fact is; that his name was little known. His is one of those understandings, highly valued in the bureaux by men of ability, but whose services have not been of a dazzling description. They have been, however, not the less solid and numerous. M. Moline de Saint You, is an officer of the Empire. He distinguished himself at Austerlitz, where he took a Russian flag, was presented to the Emperor, decorated with the Legion of Honor, and chosen Aid-de-Camp by Massena. In 1815, he was promoted to the rank of Colonel by Napoleon, and made Chief Officer, of the Ordnance.—He distinguished himself at Waterloo, and the Restoration punished him for his devotion to the Emperor, by refusing to recognize his rank, and added in succession those of Lieutenant General and Field Marshal. He was charged with a diplomatic mission to Spain, [illegible] correspondence bore the impress of [illegible] so remarkable, that Louis Philippe wrote on the margin, 'this man can be relied on.' Doubtless this remark has [illegible] and shall be no small service to the correspondent, and perhaps he owes the three-fold good fortune he has just experienced as much to these few words, as to the personal recommendation of Marshal Soult. I say three-fold, because he was made a Peer of France and Grand Officer of the Legion of Honor, at the same time that he was raised to the Ministry. These two first dignities were a necessary consequence of the last. It is indispensably necessary that a Minister should be a member of one of the Chambers, and as M. de Saint You was not a Deputy, it was a matter of necessity to make him a Peer. It is likewise indispensable for a Minister of War to rank as high in the Legion of Honor as most of the officers. From these several exigencies, M. de Saint You rose in twenty-four hours with a rapidity of which history presents few examples."

The Cotton Crop.

The intelligent editor of the Concordia Intelligencer has the following remarks in reference to the effect of the late severe weather on the standing Cotton Crop:—

"The severity of the weather during the last ten days has had a disastrous influence upon all the Cotton standing in the fields in this section of country; the hail and sleet battering it to the ground, thrashing it and leaving it worthless. This unexpected "Northern Invation"—for we can call it nothing else—makes a very great change in our estimate of the amount of the Cotton crop for the year."

Mr. Mangum.

The speech of Mr. Mangum, in the late debate on the national defences, is justly complimented by the journals for the truly American sentiments it contains. Mr. Mangum is one of the principal Whig leaders in the Senate, and the expression of his opinions may be considered an endorsement of the sentiments entertained by the portion of the Whig party that he represents upon the present difficulty with Great Britain. We make the following extracts from his speech:—

"Let us stand ready in advance, if it be necessary, to strengthen the arm of the Executive, so that when our blow falls on the enemy it will strike his very sensorium, and place him prostrate and powerless beneath our feet. What need, sir, let me ask, to tell us that Great Britain is the mistress of one hundred and fifty millions of people! I can outbrag the honorable Senator (Mr. Cass)—I ask pardon for using such a word—but this I say, that never can that power be permitted to stain this republic with dishonor. Whatever her greatness, we are able to meet her; but I hope the collision may be avoided. If it come, it will be a deep reproach upon the civilization of the present day.—And, in my humble judgment, if we have recourse to arms, this Oregon question will be a mere pretext, and not the cause of the war.

I know well that this world is ever agitated, heaving and struggling under the operation of two great adverse principles of government that shake the continent of Europe—the whole of Christendom—the great republican principle, on one hand, by which all the power rests upon the basis of the people, and the people have the control; and, on the other absolute or qualified. I trust there is no man in America, whose blood flows more warmly in favor of republican government, than does mine. Yet, when I see that on the other side of the water the whole press are treating us with a contempt—affected as I believe—with a disdain, having more of jealousy in it than of actual disdain—and when our press meets that again—I think all this ought to be silenced for the present. I think, in these halls of ours, we should be extremely guarded and reserved on the subject of recrimination, when this delicate question is pending. I know that there are many things in the history of the country which have perhaps had much to do with the production of the excited state of feeling. I am very much inclined to apprehend that at the bottom of it rests those great principles to which I have already alluded, in a state of heaving and almost destructive antagonism—destructive it would have been to the principle of free government had it not struck its roots to the very centre of this great continent. When the ultimate trial of strength comes, you will find that the people of this country are as one man. Christendom itself will shake and tremble. Thrones may fall and tumble, and dynasties be swept from the face of the earth, for that principle works in other lands as well as ours.

* * * * * * * * * * *

"I pray God that the contest may never come; but if it should come, I repeat, we will all be found as one man. Never can we consent to suffer dishonor, or surrender our rights. If it come, can any man estimate the amount of evil resulting to the civilized world, if we are in that unprepared state, that the Senator seems to apprehend? Possessed of the power described, Great Britain has the ability to strike a blow, which will be felt throughout our whole Atlantic and Gulf coast, sweeping our whole seaboard, as with a sirroco of fire. Suppose she did; and suppose that the merciless savage were brought to bear upon our frontier, inflicting on man, woman, and child, their terrible species of invasion—the enemy might have these advantages. But this subject, in my opinion, and it is one to which I have given great consideration—excites the national feeling towards that point, at which war should never cease till one or the other party was exterminated. And after all, who can fear the issue of such a conflict? With all her mighty resources, we could eventually sweep her forever from the continent. I do not want her possessions; I would not have them as a gift; but in case of such a war every vestige of British territorial possession on the soil of this continent would be forever seized.

* * * * * * * * * * *

I do hope that this controversy can be adjusted without war. If war do come, I repeat, it will be the signal for the great final conflict between European systems of government, and of those great principles of democratic liberty which have made this republic such a great and powerful nation.

The Canada Press.

The Toronto Patriot is very severe upon the message of our President, especially upon that part referring to our relations with Great Britain.—As to the probability of war, the Patriot counts upon the opposition of the South to such a measure, as it must "ruin the cotton trade and seriously jeopardize the domestic institution of slavery," and upon the universal desire for peace which must prevail along the seabard. The West it thinks will be "heroically clamorous for hostilities."—It apprehends that the twelve months notice will be given to Great Britin, but says Congress must, if it intends hostilities go farther, and effect heavy loans for the necessary expenses of a giant struggle." It adds:

"If it separate without doing this, then we shall distrust the sincerity of the apparent desire for a brush with John Bull. If these appropriations be made, and preparations commenced, then, indeed, we of the Canadas may look to our primings. Three months from a declaration of war, would see old England's flag outside most of the Atlantic seaports, and inside a few of them.

However much we may deplore the effects of the hostilities on our progress in civilization and improvement, we entertain no shadow of doubt of the result. Canada will emphatically do its duty; English, Irish, Scotch, and Native born will rally, with a few and miserable exceptions, in favor of Monarchy and Britis Connexion. Detroit, Queenstown, and Chrisler's Farm are yet unforgotten names."

The New Orleans Slave Case.

James Lourpre, the [illegible] accused of whipping a black boy in so shocking a manner as to cause his death, has been held to bail in the sum of $5,000. The case, the particulars of which we have already published, was one of horrible atrocity.

Attempt at Infanticide.

At New York, on Wednesday night, James Williams, in a state of intoxication, was found sitting on a stoop at the corner of Beckman and Cliff streets, New York, with a basket in his hand, in which was a nicely dressed newly born female infant. On interrogating him, he said he had been employed by some one, whose name he did not know, to throw the infant into the dock—and had been paid two and sixpence for doing it—and that his feelings overpowered him, and he could not do it. Be was taken to the Station house, and the infant was taken care of by the wife of one of the officers. Soon after, a female named Mary Ferris was also arrested on suspicion of being concerned in the nefarious deed, and was also locked up. It seemed that she had been employed by some one to see the infant disposed of—but whether she is guilty of inciting to its destruction or not, is not known. The real authors of the outrage are unknown.

The Private Mails.

The American Mail Company having expected that an attempt would be made to increase the rates of postage, have continued their organization to the present time. Whig Ward Meetings.

SECOND WARD.—James W. Baxter, Thos. Simmons, Alex. Miller, John McKee, David McClelland.

THIRD WARD.—Joshua Hanna, John Shipton, Jas. A. Lewis, John T. Whitten. R. R. R. Dumars.

FOURTH WARD.—Richard Hays, Robt. M'Knight, John M'Michael, S. R. Johnson.

FIFTH WARD.—Charles Ferguson, H. M'Kelvy, Daniel Taylor, Jas. Dean, George Dobbs.

SIXTH WARD.—Wm. A. Hill, C. S. Eyster, J. M. Christy, Andrew Miller, J. M. Brush,

COUNCILS.—In the Fourth Ward, on Saturday night the following gentlemen were nominated as the candidates to be supported on the Whig ticket for Councils.

The delegates are understood to be unanimously in favor of the re-nomination of Mr. Howard, having been elected with that understanding. The proceedings of the Convention will therefore be characterised by a spirit of union and harmony, which will, no doubt be carried out by the Whig party at the polls.

SELECT COUNCIL.—F. Lorenz.

COMMON do.—M. Robertson, J. Pennock, C. Stockton, S. Stoner. J. A. Rinehart,

SIXTH WARD.—The following ticket was nominated by the Whigs on Saturday evening:

SELECT COUNCIL.—J. Livingston.

No other wards in the City nominated Council tickets on Saturdy night.

DISTRICT COURT.—The Jury in the case of Dimbler vs. Bailey, retired on Saturday morning, after hearing Judge Hepburn's charge. They were absent about an hour, when they returned a sealed verdict, the nature of which will be made known this morning. We venture the prediction that the verdict of the Jury will be found an acquittal of the defendant.

This was the second trial of the case. At the former trial, the Jury could not agree. There is no doubt about their agreement this time, however.

COURT OF COMMON PLEAS.—Judge Patton, presiding.—The Jury in the case of Walker vs. Walker, returned a verdict for Plaintiff. By this decision, a very large amount of property passes from the control of the defendant, Mrs. Mary Walker, who is by it declared a lunatic. Eyster and Mahon for plaintiff; Woods, M'Candless and M'Clure for defence.

DUQUESNE WAY.—The board of viewers appointed by the Court a few days since, to assess the damages upon the opening of Duquesne Way, met on Saturday, for the discharge of their duties. They reported $733, as the amount of damages sustained by Mr. Wm. Tesse.

EXPLOSION.—The connecting pipes of the boilers in the Hope Cotton Factory, Allegheny, exploded last Saturday. They gave warning, however, by several symptoms, in time for all in the engine house to escape before the catastrophe, so that, fortunately, no one was hurt.

ALLEGHENY MAYORALTY.—We understand that a majority of the Delegates elected at the Allegheny Whig Ward meetings, on Saturday night, are favorable to the nomination of Mr. Cassatt.

ALLEGHENY POLICE—Sunday.—There was one case before his Honor on Sunday, Sent to the hill.

SPLENDID SHAWLS.—We are requested to call attention to the advertisement of the splendid shawls for sale by Messrs. Alexander & Day.—They are indeed beautiful, and if they do not sell fast, we miss our guess as to the taste of our ladies.

THAT COAT.—Mr. Fitz Charles condescended last Saturday to tell the officers where they could get Mr. Singer's coat.

FINED.—The man who smashed M. Cimeotte's windows, M. C. refused to prosecute,

POLICE.—Sunday Morning.—There were four right looking customers before his Honor, all of whom, on account of the inclemency of the weather, were sent to the hill. One fellow who was sent up for 30 days, implored his honor, not to give him so severe a sentence, as he said he had a vote, and desired to have a voice in the municipal election. His plea would'nt take; and he had to go.

POLICE.—There were but two cases before his Honor on Saturday morning—a gentleman and a lady. The former paid his fine and the latter was sent to the hill.

Encourage the Self-made Man.

"The Smoky City—a Tale of Crime," is a new work about issuing from the press of A. A. Anderson, by Mr. Young, author of the "Orphan," and her works, including numerous Poems, which have evinced a great degree of originality, genius and taste. The subject of this work is a deeply interesting one, particularly to the people of Pittsburgh, as the "Hero" and all his satelites will readily be recognised by many of our citizens. It is a tale of real life—of crime in high life, with a full developement of its mysterious connections. From an examination of the proof sheets, it is discoverable that the author has done ample justice to this most interesting subject. Mr. Young is a self-made man, and is deserving the patronage of the good people of the "Smoky City." Those who have read his poems which have appeared in their own journals, and those of the East, must have observed that he is by nature endowed with a portion of "Promethian fire," and has rode the nag "Pegasus" over "Parnassian ground." May he persevere and continue to

Sing how Appollo "sweeps the lyre,"
And fills the soul with restless fire;
Of how the Poets struggle do tell,
You where the nine old muses dwell—
If on Parnasian grounds you lay,
You'll Poet be at rising day;
Can take the harp and pour a strain,
Will charm the gods to earth again. DION.

THE SMOKEY CITY—A TALE OF CRIME—by Samuel Young.

We have scarcely had time to more than glance at the work. We consider it quite an improvement in style of narration, on the other writings of the author; and the story is not deficient in exciting interest. The tale is said to be based upon fact; and no doubt possesses additional interest to those familiar with the circumstance and persons treated of.

ENORMENSE PROFITS OF THE HOUSE OF ROTHSCHILD.—It is stated in a Paris letter, by M. Gaillardet, that a current rumor, in the beginning of this month, in the Paris Exchange, was that the house of Rothschild had made forty millions francs profit on the shares it held in the great Northern Railroad, which all the stock held by it had been sold by and had been sold at 300 francs premium the share. It seems certain," says the same letter, "that the profits of this house, for the last year, amounted to more than one hundred and twenty millions of francs, and that its accounts, when last balanced, showed an active capital equal to the whole budget of France—something like seven hundred and forty millions." Twenty-ninth Congress.

FIRST SESSION.

Correspondence of the Baltimore American.

WASHINGTON, DEC. 13.

U. S. SENATE.

A large number of petitions were presented by various Senators.

Mr. Fairfield presented a memorial praying compensation for French spoliations prior to 1800, and moved its reference to a Select Committee. He said that it had been usual to refer similar petitions to the Committee on Foreign relations, but as a majority of that committee were opposed to granting the relicif prayed for he thought it but an act of justice to the claimants to give the memorial the reference asked for.

The reference to a Select Committee was advocated by Messrs. J. M. Clayton, Archer, Miller, and Webster, and opposed by Messrs. Dix, Allen, Mangum, Speight, and Haywood.

Mr. Mangum moved a reference to the Committee on Foreign affairs Mr. Speight demanded the yeas and nays, which were ordered, and the motion did not prevail. Ayes 21, noes 22.

Mr. Speight moved its reference to the Committee on Claims. Lost without a division.

The memorial was then referred to a Select Committee, consisting of Messrs. Fairfield, Dayton, Dix, Mangum and Sturgeon.

JOINT OCCUPANCY OF OREGON.

Mr. Allen introduced a joint resolution advising the President of the United States to give notice to Great Britin of the termination of the joint occupancy of Oregon.

Mr. Allen asked that the joint resolution be read a second time, which was objected to, and it was laid over, under the rule.

Mr. Upham asked to be excused from serving as Chairman of the Committee on Pensions, which was granted. Mr. Johnson of La. was appointed in his place.

Mr. Johnson, of La. offered a resolution instructing the Committee on Commerce to enquire into the expediency of making an appropriation for the erection of a Custom House at New Orleans.

OREGON TERRITORIAL GOVERNMENT.

Mr. Atchison offered a resolution instructing the Committee on Territories to inquire into the expediency of establishing a territorial government in Oregon. Also a number of resolutions relative to the erection of blockhouses and other fortifications, the employment of mounted dragoons, organization of the militia, and establishment of an Indian agency in Oregon.

The bills introduced on the second day of the session by Mr. Crittenden, providing for the purchase of the stock of the Louisville and Portland Canal, and for the improvement of the navigation of the Ohio, Mississippi Misouri and Arkansas rivers, were severally read a second time and referred to the Committee on roads and canals.

Several private bills were read a second time and referred to the appropriate Committees.

Mr. Hannegan moved that the Senate proceed to the election of Chaplain, but withdrew his motion at the request of Mr. Levy, with the understanding that the election should take place on Monday.

The Senate proceeded to the orders of the day, and the several resolutions of inquiry heretofore offered were taken up and adopted. The resolution offered by Mr. J. M. Clayton, fixing the compensation of the public printer, was referred to the Committee on the Contingent expenses of the Senate.

The Senate passed Resolutions during the day paying the funeral expenses of the late Sergeant-at-Arms, Mr. Dyer, and his salary up to the time Mr. Beale was elected.

Also a resolution calling upon the President of the United States for information as to the condition of the timber lands in Florida.

The Senate then went into Executive Session, and after some time spent therein, adjourned over until Monday next.

The business in Executive Session was unimportant.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

NATURALIZATION LAWS.

The unfinished business of yesterday was the first in order, and Mr. Levin of Pa. was announced as entitled to the floor.

Mr. L. went on to defend the motion before the House, to refer the Massachusetts Resolutions to a Select Committee, during the twenty minutes allowed him, and closed with an earnest appeal to the House to allow the reference of the resolutions to a select committee.

[Edward S. Dargin, member elect from the State of Ala. was here introduced to the House by Mr. Yancey, and took his seat after the Speaker had administered to him the oath of office.]

The debate was continued by Mr. Chase of Tenn. who advocated the reference of the resolutions to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. Bayley, of Va. followed on the same side.

Mr. Bowlin of Mo. spoke in opposition to the reference to a select committee, as did also Mr. Gordon and Mr. Farran of Ohio.

Mr. Davis of Miss. was opposed to any reference of this subject to any committee at all.

The debate was continued by Mr. Grover of N. Y. and by Mr. Hunt of N. Y. Soon after three o'clock the latter gave way to a motion to adjourn, and the House accordingly adjourned.

WASHINGTON DEC. 13.

The Senate was not in session to-day.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. Campbell of New York, gave notice that he would at an early day, introduce a bill for the establishment of a warhouseing system.

Also. a bill, regulating the compensation, duties &c., of the Consuls of the United States.

A resolution was introduced by J. R. Ingersoll, asking the Commitee on the Judiciary to inquire into the expediency of reporting as to the propriety of transferring the duties of the Judges of the Supreme Court to the Judges of the District Court, and that the Judges of the Supreme Court hold two terms each year at the seat of Government.

Also a resolution of inquiry to change Virginia land warrants into Government scrip.

That the Committee on the Militia inquire into the expediency of arming and equipping one Company of the State Militia in each state, and taking them into the service of the United States when their services are necessary.

And an inquiry that the Committee on Pensions be instructed to inquire into the expediency of amending the Pension Act of 1832, so that all who served in the Revolutionary war shall hereafter be entitled to the benefits of the Pension Act.

A resolution was also introduced asking the President of the United States to report as to the seizure of an American vessel by a British government vessel on the coast of Africa and near Liberia. Objected to and laid over.

A Bill to reduce and graduate the price of Public Lands. Also to establish a protective Preemption System was reported.

SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTION—Mr. Owen of Ia. introduced a bill for the establishment of the Smithsonian Institution. Referred to a Committee of seven members.

Mr Douglass of Ill. from the Committee on Territories, reported a bill for the protection of American citizens in Oregon. Referred to the Committee of the Whole, and made the special order of the day, for the second Tuesday in January, and every day thereafter till disposed of.

N. E. BOUNDARY.—Mr. Hamlin, of Me., offered a Resolution calling upon the President of the United States for information in relation to the navigation of the river St. Johns, and the Washington treaty. Also for copies of all correspondence upon the subject during the two years past.

THE OREGON.—Several Resolutions of inquiry upon the subject of the North Western Territory, (similar to those offered in the Senate) were submitted, all looking to the establishment of civil and military power West of the Rocky Mountains.

Mr. Winthrop, of Mass., offered a series of Resolutions, declaring that there is no occasion to suspend the negotiations between the United States and Great Britain in reference to the disputed territory,—that it would be a disgrace to both nations to submit such a question to be decided by arms, and that nothing has occurred by which such a question may not be referred to arbitration,—that arbitration does not necessarily involve the necessity of a reference to crowned heads, but that all the world is open from which to make a choice of Commissioners, who may wisely decide as to the powers of both Government.

Mr. Winthrop's Resolutions excited some interest in the House, but as there was danger of their being laid upon the table, he gave notice of his intention to debate them, which carried them over to a future day.

Mr. Douglass of Ill. followed with two Resolutions, declaring first, that "our title to the whole of Oregon South of 54 deg. 40m. was clear and unquestionable." Secondly, "That being a title, it was not a proper subject of arbitration."

Mr. Douglass gave notice that he should debate the Resolution he had offered, when the gentleman from Massachusetts called up those which he had submitted. A Resolution was also submitted in reference to the employment of the Home Squadron in the Pacific.

SUB TREASURY BILL.—Mr. Dromgoole, from the Committee of Ways and Means, reported a bill for the better protection and collection of the public money, which was read twice and referred to a Committee of the Whole.

Other Resolutions were offered, perhaps a hundred in all. Among them were those looking to some connection of the waters of the United States with those flowing through the Oregon Territory.

Also, to the two per cent. fund belonging to the new States, and withheld from the non-paying States indebted to the General Government under an act of the last Congress.

Also proposing 10,000 extra Reports of the Commissioner of the Land Office—extra copies of Fremont's Report of two expeditions to the Rocky Mountains—proposing a Canal around the Falls of St. Marie—a tonnage duty on Canal boats, &c.

All these were Resolutions of inquiry, and all were referred to Committees as objectionable, or laid upon the table.

Between two and three, P.M., an adjournment was moved and carried. Ayes 63—noes 63. The adjournment was to Monday next.

River Matters.

☞ There were 4 feet water in the channel last evening, and, from present appearances, we think the river will close during the next twelve hours, as the weather is extremely cold and the river full of floating ice. The Michigan came up and went back on Saturday. We don't think she will try it again, until the weather moderates.

New Boats.

☞ Capt. McDonald, of St. Louis, has contracted with Mr. S. Walker, for a new Cotton boat.

☞ Capt. Lyda's new boat is nearly completed. She will be called John J. Hardin, and is intended for a regular packet on the Illinois river.

☞ Capt. Jacobs' new boat is nearly completed.

☞ CASE OF CAPT. TURPIN.—The New Orleans Picayune of the 10th says we stated in our last that the bonds of Capt. E. A. Turpin, of the steamboat Marquette had been forfeited by his non-appearance at the time of trial. We now learn that he has arrived, and that his detention was entirely owing to the difficulty of travelling the Ohio at the present low stage of water and fogs.

NAVIGATION OF PEARL RIVER.—The obstructions in West Pearl Pass have been removed. A passage has been cut through Holmes' Bayou, leading from East Pearl, near the head of West Pearl, below the raft. Navigation is now safe for steamboats of a large class.

☞ The steamer Wisconsin arrived at Steubenville on Friday, the ice being too heavy for her to reach this city. We would inform the Gazette men that there is not the least danger of her being lost.

☞ The St. Louis Reveille of the 14th says:—"The river rose yesterday, at this point, from back water, nearly twelve inches. The weather is so mild, as to occasion a general thaw; two or three days' steady rain would now break up the ice in the harbor.

☞ The Louisville Journal of the 17th inst. says: "The river here has receded 6 inches in the last 24 hours. There was 6½ feet water in the canal last evening by the mark. We may, however, confidently expect another swell, as the late rise at Pittsburgh has not yet reached here."

☞ The St. Louis Republican, of Saturday says: "The weather was quite mild yesterday, and the snow and ice in the streets melted very considerably, but the sun made no impression upon the ice. Passengers continue to cress the river on the ice with perfect safety.

Married,

On Thursday evening, the 18th inst., by the Rev. Mr. Sterling, Mr. JOSEPH CRAIG, to Miss ELIZA DELAVAN, all of this city.

With the above notice we received a most liberal allowance of the wedding cake, than which a kiss from the bride could alone be more delicious. If the good wishes of the Printers can ensure happiness, we are quite certain that the young couple will experience all the imaginable bliss of wedded life.

Autumn's Warning.

I HAVE come, I have come, to bly bare the green trees
And to warn through his summer joys my turbulent breeze;
I have come to strip hedges while rushing along,
And to silence the note of the warbler's song.
I have come with my mist and my cold falling dew,
To tell you that winter will soon be in view.
I have come to give warning that all ought to wear
The new style of GUMS that excludes the damp air.

I mention these articles because I know well,
That none in the city their beauty excel;
Tis worthy of fame in all the trade round;
Such durable articles there ne'er can be found.
These GUMS, you will find, are sure to resist
The cold blowing breeze and the chill Autumn mist.

My breezes may blow and my vapors may fall,
But the mineralized GUM is sure to stand all.
You'll never have cause to regret what you've done,
In purchasing shoes made of Mineralized Gum.
Then take my advice, and wear the Gum shoes;
And remember, it is the true Autumn news.

FROM FIFTY TO ONE HUNDRED LOTS IN ALLEGHENY CITY, FOR SALE.—The undersigned offers for sale, on accomocating terms, from fifty to one hundred lots in Allegheny city, the titles to which are indisputable. These lots are twenty four feet in front, running back from eighty to one hundred and forty feet, except the corner lots, which vary from one hundred to upwards of two hundred feet front. They are pleasantly situated in the First Ward, on the bank of the Ohio river, comprising the only portion of Allegheny City suitable for a good Steamboat, or Ferry landing, and are well calculated for residences, extensive Manufacturing establishments, or other purposes. The Omnibus from the bridge and the Stage for Beaver pass the property, daily, the former at short intervals, and Coal can be procured from the opposite side of the Ohio, at any season of the year. Manufacturers can obtain the quantity of ground necessary, upon very reasonable terms, and will find it to possess peculiar advantages for such purposes. Mechanics, river men and others will find it an excellent location for the erection of dwellings. A plot of ground can be seen and further information obtained by calling upon the subscribers, on the premises.
